

The Pacific Commercial Advertiser

Vol. LI. No. 1180. April 15, 1898.

HONOLULU, HAWAII TERRITORY. FRIDAY, APRIL 15, 1910.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

DIVIDING UP BIG FURNITURE FIRM'S TROUBLE THE HAWAII BUSINESS

Sensational Rumors About Affairs of the Well-Known House of J. Hopp & Co.

MANAGER BRAY HAS LEFT

Big Steamship Companies Are Rearranging Their Routes.

NEVADAN IS WITHDRAWN

Settling Matson and American Hawaiian Fight for Sugar Freight.

The initial steps in an inevitable war between the American-Hawaiian and Matson shipping lines is believed to be indicated by the announcement of the withdrawal of the American-Hawaiian's steamer Nevadan from the San Francisco-Honolulu trade.

The freighter, on leaving for San Francisco next Tuesday afternoon, will be making her last trip on that run, and the route will be discontinued permanently by the A-H company.

Offers of freight at San Francisco for the Nevadan are being refused, and the shippers must have recourse to the Matson and Oceanic lines. There is also talk of the Nevadan being chartered by the Matson company to operate between here and San Francisco for transporting its freight and increased sugar consignments.

The American-Hawaiian line, it is understood, will devote its entire energies on the triangular run with San Francisco as a base, running thence to Seattle and Tacoma, thence to the Hu-

(Continued on Page Two.)

TO QUARANTINE TYPHOID FEVER

RUSSIANS ARE A SERIOUS MENACE

Board of Health Takes Steps to Stamp Out Dangerous Disease.

Typhoid fever and diarrhea viruses are to be listed by the board of health as among the quarantinable diseases and treated accordingly. A resolution to that effect was adopted by the board of health at its meeting yesterday afternoon, and the attorney-general was requested to draw up a regulation to that effect, to be submitted to the Governor for his approval. Board of health regulations approved by the executive of the Territory are now and must be enacted as such.

The action was taken at a request of Doctor Pratt, who stated that in this opinion the only way to stamp out typhoid fever, which has been naturally prevalent or both would be to put it in a position to auto-quarantine regulations in cases where the patients could not be taken to hospital and where conditions seemed to demand isolation. It was also ordered that measures to prevent passage of the disease of man and animals were continuing, and that disease was included in the list of those dangerous to the public health.

No Laundries Near Tenement.

The laundries are now being decidedly opposed on the part of Chinese laundrymen in all tenement buildings, and turned down the petition of L. H. Along the sidewalk of street a handbill addressed to Chinese laundrymen in Kalihi, signed by Doctor Pratt, advised that there had been a good deal of talk about the Chinese laundrymen being bad, and that they were not wanted for their work.

In fact, he suggested that the Chinese laundrymen be allowed to do their work in a good and orderly fashion, and that they be allowed to remain for the benefit of the public.

(Continued on Page Two.)

COLONEL SCHUYLER IS DETAILED TO ACCOMPANY CHINESE PRINCE

Colonel Schuyler, U.S.A., from San Francisco, will accompany Prince Yung-Tai, the Chinese Minister of Revenue, and the Chinese Consul, on a visit to the Hawaiian Islands. He has been detailed to the war department by his superior, Gen. W. G. Thompson, to represent the Chinese government in the negotiations with the Hawaiian Islands.

Colonel Schuyler is now in the city, having just come from San Francisco, and is staying at the Hotel of the Pacific. As Colonel Schuyler has been sent on a mission of state, he will be received by the Governor of the Hawaiian Islands, and will be shown the courtesy of having a special train to travel through the islands after the principal arrival.

Colonel Schuyler is now in the city, having just come from San Francisco, and is staying at the Hotel of the Pacific. He has been sent on a mission of state, and will be received by the Governor of the Hawaiian Islands, and will be shown the courtesy of having a special train to travel through the islands after the principal arrival.

MAYOR GETS BOXING GLOVES FOR SCRAPPERS

A pair of boxing gloves, given to the Mayor's desk, are the latest news of the day, having come from the Chinese Consul, who has called the attention of the public to whether Mayor Peet is fit to be the chief executive of the city. The Consul, who is well known, said that he had been told that the Mayor's conduct during the recent strike was not good, and that he had been advised to have a word with him, and to get him to leave the city.

LOCAL JAPANESE BANK RECEIVES FRIENDS IN PALATIAL NEW BUILDING

THE PRESIDENT INSULTED BY HISSES

Woman Suffragists in Washington Create a Painful Scene.

TAFT DISAPPOINTS THEM

They Hiss Him When He Refuses Complete Support of Their Movement.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The President of the United States was sharply hissed yesterday when he addressed a woman's suffrage convention and merely intimated that he was not in sympathy with its objects. The extraordinary demonstration was the sensation of the day in Washington. When the President, in general language, indicated that he was not a strong advocate of granting suffrage to women, the convention broke into a bitter demonstration, and the chief executive had to pause while hisses interrupted his address.

Taft appeared on the platform of the convention in response to an invitation from the leaders of the suffrage movement.

He was very warmly greeted. But when, in the course of his address, he remarked that he was not "altogether in sympathy" with the woman's suffrage movement, a loud chorus of hissing drowned his speech.

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."

The building is one that any banking institution in the United States, no matter how wealthy, might be proud of, said L. Tenney Peck. "Its fixtures would do credit to rich New York institutions and may well be regarded with local pride."